

Throughout the last decade, many more adults thought that their local crime rate had been increasing than thought that it had been decreasing

